Leading Wellbeing

Presented by Rhiannon McGee, Director of Student Experience and Engagement and Jacqui Moses, Positive Education Projects Coordinator at Geelong Grammar School

ABOUT

In recent years, there has been an increasing emphasis on the promotion of wellbeing in schools and with this has come the proliferation of wellbeing leadership roles across school sectors. Those working in these roles will know that leading wellbeing in schools is both rewarding and challenging. Schools must always adapt and evolve their approach in response to emerging research and practice, as well as the changing needs of the school community. In this workshop, Rhiannon and Jacqui will share key strategies for shaping, leading and progressing whole school approaches to wellbeing – drawing on examples from the recent evolution of Geelong Grammar School's wellbeing and positive education programs. Participants - whether they be current leaders, aspiring leaders, or their school's wellbeing champions - will be encouraged to share their own experiences and examples of effective practice, helping build a toolkit of successful strategies for wellbeing leadership in schools.
